Oil Drilling Expected to Start Soon Somewhere Near This Place

Many Farms in Southern End of Steuben County Now Are Under Lease—At Least Four Companies Have Been Contracting in this Vicinity—One Man States His Company May Drill in Thirty Days.

If present indications are to be taken seriously this vicinity will soon be the center of oil drilling operations which many people believe will bring a genuine boom here.

It is expected that a test well will be started in a few weeks at the most, that should shed considerable light on what is under our feet.

Since the first of May farm land in this vicinity has been leased at a rapid rate. At least four companies have had men more or less constantly in the field making leases with all land owners who could be persuaded to sign on the dotted line. This week a representative of one of the earliest concerns that came into the field was in Addison. This man stated he expected his company would start drilling near here in about thirty days.

The representative of another company informed the Sentinel representative recently that his concern had placed about 3,000 acres under lease and would like to increase its holdings to 10,000 acres. With so many companies taking leases, unleased land is getting quite scarce, and doubtless when there is none left that can be secured one of the companies will move in a drill rig and start operations. Drilling for oil is no new thing in southern Steuben County, but no one has ever struck oil. Gas has been struck in small quantities at various places, and oil men seem confident that if a hole is sunk deep enough producing quantities of oil or gas will be found. Consequently anyone starting any "wildcatting" here must expect to go deep or throw his money into a hole in the ground, for deep drilling is an expensive operation.

Meanwhile successful drilling continues between Seneca and Cayuga lakes, a number of gas wells there having already been brought in. the vicinity Altay and Dundee and the vicinity of Altay to Dundee and Horseheads. Another field is now being tested with a well at Branchport. Drilling has continued there for several weeks and the well is now said to be down about 3,000 feet. Nearly every farmer who has leased land around here is pretty sure the first well will be sunk on his farm, yet no one knows who will be the first happy land owner to see a derrick placed in sight of his windows.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Charles Crans entertained with a dinner last Friday evening at her home on the Rathbone road, in honor of Mr. Crans' birthday. The guests included Mr. and Mrs.. B. E. Mullaney and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Swan of Addison, Mr. and Mrs. John Croft W. C. Newcomb and Harold Widger of Rathbone, Misses Dolores and Elizabeth Horey of Cameron Mills, George King of Corning, Mrs. C. H. Moore, Jr. and E. A. Stucker of Bath, and the honor guest Charles A. Crans.

KILLING FROST REPORTED ON TUESDAY NIGHT

As a climax to the disastrous drought that has ruined many a farmer's crop this summer, a killing frost was reported in some sections near here Tuesday night. Ice a quarter of an inch thick is said to have frozen at Cook's Corners, killing potato tops and causing damage to other crops.

PIERCE-SELLECK REUNION

The 29th annual reunion of the Pierce-Selleck families will be held at Goodhue Lake on Wednesday, August 20. A cordial greeting awaits all members of the clan.

ALBEE REUNION

The annual reunion of the Albee family will be held Wednesday, August 20, at the home of Mrs. Emma Bly in South Addison.

LARGE STACK FALLS AT THE FACTORY

A section of the large smoke stack on the Park, Winton & True Company factory blew down yesterday morning. About 21 feet of the stack fell, but the remaining section was still high enough to project over the edge of the roof, and as a breeze kept up all day sufficient draft was given to keep the boilers going. The saw dust and refuse is being stored as made and only coal is being burned for the time being in order to obviate the danger of fire.

The fall of the stack was caused by corrosion, acids in the fumes from the soft coal pitting the metal until the sides were practically eaten away. It is planned to erect a temporary section to replace the part that fell until winter, when a new stack will be erected. The present stack is only a few years old. It is fortunate for both the firm and its employees that a shutdown will not be necessary as a rush of orders is keeping the plant busy this month.

GRANGE SOCIAL

The young people of Addison Grange will give the second of a series of socials, at the Grange Hall, next Friday evening. This will be a clothespin social, the idea being for each girl to bring two clothespins dressed as dolls, these dolls to be auctioned during the evening to determine supper partners. The committee members are Robert Graf, chairman, Edith Tompkins and Esther Hannahs.

Fire Danger Constantly is Present as Drought Continues

The long continued drought in this section has produced a fire menace against which citizens of Woodhull should take every precaution. The burning heat of the last few weeks has dried every building to tinder, and grass which ordinarily makes a green barrier against the spread of fire has been scorched to a crisp by the burning sun until it is ready to ignite with the slightest spark.

This is a time when every person should constantly exercise the greatest caution to prevent a public calamity. The holocaust that swept unchecked through a section of the village of Gibson last week, could happen as easily in any community where buildnigs are huddled together. The average person is not intentionally careless, but through thoughtlessness will commit acts that may be perfectly harmless under common condidions, yet when a crisis like the present dry weather occurs, a thoughtless act may prove to have far reaching consequences. At the time of a community crisis every member should take it upon himself or herself to guard the public welfare in every possible way, and the least that each one can do is to exercise common sense precautions.

Special care should be taken not to throw lighted matches or cigarettes in grass or near rubbish. Cigarettes continue to burn long after they are left and a gust of wind can carry one considerable distance to create a blaze. Unusual precautions should be observed regarding bonfires. If it is necessary to burn papers or other waste at all they should be confined to an adequate incinerator from which no sparks can escape. No open bonfires should be started unless the builder is willing to watch it until the material is entirely consumed, and the ashes should then be made harmless with a pail of water. Bonfires detected in exposed places and any grass fires should be reported to authorities at once.

Residents of either village or country will do well to put on a little preparedness campaign of their own against fire. Barrels of water and buckets placed at convenient points near buildings may easily be the means of saving a home or a valuable barn, for a few quarts of water when a fire starts are worth more than barrelsful when it gets under way. Check up the surroundings of your buildings and see what fire hazard may be eliminated before it eliminates the buildings.

Above all, let everyone avoid disaster by being CAREFUL with fire.

A Republican Pages Reuben Oldfield

Editor The Sentinel:

The expected has happened.

The glittering, sparkling bait of political wets, for some time dangling before the eyes and hopes of congressional aspiration, has finally been jumped at by our poetical county clerk, and swallowed. He is firmly hooked and booked for the fall (in the) primaries.

Many are sorry to learn he has blundered to the extent that he may be retired to scenes of political "Wildwood" where at his leisure he may further scout for Red Skin relics and Indian lore, and many more things not now in store.

The main plank in Reuben's platform is the desire that the law should be changed to allow the people to have " low-powered stimulating beverages". This would nullify the entire 18th amendment, for no booze law has ever been satisfactorily enforced.

It is understood that Congressman Stalker has for some time provided free milk for undernourished children in some of the Elmira schools.

Does Reuben think of delivering a low-powered beer by the case to these school children? Does he not know that the average health of the children in our cities has been greatly bettered by the use of more milk and less beer in the home? And does he not know that this demand for milk has wonderfully developed the dairy business and doubled the price to the producer?

Agriculture has its ups and downs but government sale and control of beer would knock down the present weakened props of the farm and dairy business.

This answers sufficiently your major plank to help the distressing state of agriculture.

Then your plank in the interest of the World War soldier. You are too late about this Reuben.

The law as recently amended gives every soldier a chance to apply for pension no matter how or when he became disabled.

Then you propose, in case of your defeat, to sustain the regular nominee.

Wadsworth expected to be so sustained by the rank and file of his party, not long ago!

Again you state that "if elected to Congress you will support the administration of President Hoover"

Our President is upholding the 18th amendment and the Volstead law. Now Reuben, how can you ride into Washington on a beer keg and consistently support the President?

Your platform is inconsistent, ridiculous, absurd as far as it means better homes and better health for children, and these ideals are just now being sought and hoped for as never before.

It is unbelievable that a majority of the voters in the Republican party will consider your effort seriously enough to vote for you on a platform of your own making fastened to a stick driven in the sand, Reuben, this entire question of wet and dry rests upon this feature in the life and history of these United States:

Is booze greater and more powerful than the constitution? The flag has never been hauled down in defeat. Let us keep it waving in tribute to more and better milk for the children of America, and in defiance of efforts to stain it with low-powered alcoholic beverages.

A Republican and Member of American Legion.

CHURCHES OF WOODHULL RESUME REGULAR SERVICES

The Baptist and Methodist Churches resumed their services Sunday after a two weeks' vacation. An offering for the Anderson Health Home will be taken at the Baptist Church next Sunday morning during the Sunday school hour.

Retrospection Of Woodhull

Excelsior

The desire for intellectual progress as exemplified by the work done at the Woodhull Academy was not confined to the home township. Pupils came from regions, which, in those days of less rapid traveling were considered to be at greater distances than we now deem them. Pennsylvania sent a large number of students, from such villages as Brookfield, Whitesville and Spring Mills.

These students came primarily for study, but along with their scholastis pursuits, they gained other benefits. It was natural in a school in which so many pupils lived as well as studied, that their home life should play no small part in their education. And for the day students also, other factors were as influential as was study.

The home life of the pupils was wholesome and happy. The student rooms occupying both the first and second floors, numbered fourteen, of these, thirteen were numbered and one un-numbered, one was over the wing in which dwelt the principal and his family. The rooms which measured about 10 by 12 feet were generally occupied by three students.

The furniture was plain and typical. The most important furnishing was a stove which burned wood for heating during the long cold winters. If the students prepared their own meals it served for cooking purposes also. Next in prominence was the double bed large enough to accommodate all three roomers. A dining table served also as a study table, and there was a chair for each of the three occupants of the room. A wood box supplied the stove, and the necessary trunk claimed its share of space.

One article which the pupils were admonished to faithfully keep on hand was an ever present water pail. During the day this was used for drinking water but at night it was always kept well filled in case of fire. Surplus articles in every student's room found a convenient storing place under the charitable bed.

There was no general dining room for the pupils who lived in the school building and the method of boarding was elective. The more economical pupils, of whom there was a large number, "boarded themselves", preparing their food on their own stoves and eating at their own tables. Others formed a club at which their meals were served them outside the school.

A prominent figure in those early days of the school was Professor Cobb. A strong disciplinarian, he kept such strict supervision over the activities of the pupils as to know exactly where each one was and with what he was occupied, most of the time. But this firmness on the part of the principal was recognized by the pupils to be that of a true friend, and a steadfast mutual friendship bound them.

One advantage which the present day school enjoys which the old Woodhull Academy lacked was a playground. In the absence of this, the pupils played in the roadway and about the school buildings. The chief winter sport for both girls and boys, was coasting down hill. In warmer weather pitching quoits was a popular game, but perhaps that which absorbed still more attention was base ball.

Some of the former students of the Academy may still remember the wrestling bouts in which the boys engaged. They were good wrestlers, but they could not compete with their principal. After every other boy in the school had been defeated, the victor would then engage in a struggle with Professor Cobb. In every one of these final combats the principal was victorious, and so each wrestling bout ended.

The inventive genius of many pupils provided them (and their fellow pupils) with amusements not prescribed by the school authorities. On one occasion, they operated on the clapper of the bell which hung in the tower of the Academy building. When the time came for the bell to call the students to their duties, not a sound came forth.

At another time, an old stove found its way, with some assistance, from the upper regions of the school building to a most unsuitable location in the lower regions. Great efforts were made to procure a cow for the purpose of enlivening chapel exercises, but these efforts were unavailing.

One experience was to be long remembered by the two room mates who participated. The pupils of the Academy were not permitted to indulge in card playing. One night a deck of euchre cards appeared at the window, courting the attention of Professor Cobb. But the principal was equal to such an occasion. Looking at the culprits earnestly he said, "I thought you were old enough to know better". The escapade was never repeated.

To a large degree scholastic achievement was made preceptible to parents of students and others interested in Woodhull Academy. Oral exhibitions of the pupils' work were important occasions for teacher, parent and pupil. Recitations, readings and dialogues comprised the programs which entertained large, interested audiences.

But there were suitable achievements incapable of such perception, being recorded day after day by every student of the Academy. Who can say but that these forces of study, of human contact and of higher influence are more certain in their efforts now than are those which were more easily recognized?

Threaten Milk Shed as Price Makes Advance

New York, Aug. 12—As milk prices in New York City advanced one cent a quart August 11, Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, Commissioner of Health, delayed extension of the Milk Shed to give producers an opportunity to keep the market supplied.

On learning of the price increase Dr. Wynne said that he was prepared to extend the supplying area if necessary, but hoped that price increase would enable the farmers within the area, which is under constant supervision by Health Department inspectors, to increase production by the purchase of grain to take the place of pasturage which has been burned out by the drought.

Although emergency plans had been made to extend the city's Milk Shed some 400 miles, the Commissioner expressed the belief that the price increase will encourage farmers in the present area and make this move unnecessary. It would be unfortunate, he said, if it was found necessary to extend the area because a less desirable quality of milk might be drawn to the city. A force of inspectors is being held in readiness, however, to be sent into the outlying areas, if the need arises.

BRIDGEMAN'S MILL LEAVES OLD FAMILY

Goodhue, Aug 12—After about a century of ownership in one family the Bridgeman mill property is to pass into new hands August 15. The mill has been purchased by a Mr. Messer of Corning who takes possession tomorrow of this land mark which without doubt has broken all records of Addison property for remaining in the ownership of one family.

The present mill was built about 1840 by Otis Bridgeman, father of Judson Bridgeman the recent owner. The structure was erected on the same site of a former mill, the history of which remains shrouded in the mystery of the past. Otis Bridgeman was a young, unmarried man at the time, having come here to locate from Chenango County. He married, reared a large family and built up this mill property as well as the Hovey farm. He died about 1886 at the age of 69 years. Mr. Bridgeman at one time owned more than a thousand acres of timber land in the vicinity of the mill, and made many improvements hereabouts. The Bridgeman Hill Road was included in his efforts and will continue to stand for years to come as a symbol of this pioneer's constructive genius.

In time a small village grew up about the mill, which in those days became known as "Bridgemanville". But as the timber gradually fell before the axe, so the hamlet eventually fell to decay until now little in sight is left of the many mill houses that once housed a busy community.

As the recent owner, Judson Bridgeman, now gives up possession. the Goodhue with sadness, loses not only one of its landmarks in the name of "Bridgeman's" but a worthy citizen as well; the last of a great family. All of which is part of the never ending change which constitutes the progressive panorama of earthly life. It is not known here as yet, what the future of this property is to be.

LARGE PUFF BALL EXCITES CURIOSITY

A mammoth puff ball has been on exhibition at the country home of Grover Thomas. The huge puff ball measured 37 inches in circumference and when discovered weighed 4½ pounds. The weight of the ball varies according to the climatic conditions. This unusual discovery which is causing so much attraction was made by Mary Thomas, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Thomas.

BAKE SALE

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church will hold a bake sale at the drug store Saturday morning, August 16. All kind of baked goods will be on sale.

Civil War Veteran Died Last Week at His Woodhull Home

George Gilbert Passes After Illness of Some Weeks—Born in Bath—Was Member of Company 8, 47th Regiment of New York Infantry During Civil War.

The death of George Gilbert occurred Thursday evening at 8:45 o'clock at his home in Woodhull, following an illness of heart trouble. Mr. Gilbert was 84 years old and a Civil War veteran. He was confined to the Soldiers' Home Hospital in Bath for about four weeks, returning home some three weeks ago.

Mr. Gilbert was born in the town of Bath, the son of Warner and Eliza Jewel Gilbert. He enlisted in the 47th Regiment of New York Infantry, Company 8, as a private about six months before the close of the Civil War.

Besides his widow he leaves one daughter, Mrs. Georgiana Day of Woodhull; a son, Charles Gilbert of Bath; and two grandchildren, Irene Day and DeForest Day of Woodhull.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Herbert Strapp, pastor of the church officiating. Burial was in Woodhull Cemetery. The bearers were George Andrus, Arthur Smith, L. F. Grist, Walter Smith, Parke Boyd and Henry Carpenter.

Those from out of town attending the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barkley of Osceola, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Burton and family of Canisteo.

MR. HOOVER AGAIN ACTS PROMPTLY

Executive intervention in the time of a drought may seem at first thought almost a conflict between government and the Almighty, but careful reflection will convince any thinking person that Mr. Hoover's course in summoning prominent people to a conference on the matter is a step in the right direction. Of course no one is able to offer the relief most needed by the entire country; long soaking rains to quench a thirsty land. That is beyond human power and as yet remains an attribute of God alone, striven for by men of science, coveted by dreamers, but unattainable by mere man.

There are, however, many things which can be done to relieve an agricultural situation which in many instances has become acute. In some sections cattle are on the point of starvation from which they can be saved only by prompt assistance in the way of fodder that can be rushed to their relief by rapid railroad transportation at cheap emergency rates. Drying up of springs and wells have placed other animals and even human beings in grave danger of life through lack of water which must be immediately provided at all hazards. Use of emergency water supplies places a health menace on thousands of people, so quick action of the Red Cross must be brought in to test all water utilized for human consumption, and check the dangers of malignant fevers brought by contaminated supplies.

Many other measures will doubtless be brought into play this week to lessen the disaster that confronts the country as a whole. It may not be possible to bring water to the fields of corn that are withering away with losses that mount to new thousands of dollars each day, but action can be taken that will relieve certain acute phases of the situation, and that is what the President aims to do.

Times of stress and difficulty have long been situations into which Mr. Hoover has stepped without hesitancy. The greater the need, the more readily he has entered the breach and fought tooth and nail to alleviate suffering. Nor has he fought alone; for always he has been ready to seek the best informed counsel on every trying difficulty to arrive at the most logical methods, take the shortest route to a remedy, and then armed thoroughly by preparation he has cut to the heart of the problem with a keen edged judgment which never has been balked. The country is scourged by drought this summer as it may never have suffered before, but a calm head is guiding the ship of state and those in the areas hardest hit may rest assured that everything possible will be done for their relief.

HARVESTING BY OLD AND NEW METHODS

When wheat was harvested with a sickle and threshed with a flail, from 35 to 50 hours of labor were required for harvesting and threshing an acre with a yield of 15 bushels. The Department of Agriculture shows how this was changed by the introduction of the cradle which saved about ten hours per acre. At present farmers in the Great Plains use from four to five hours in harvesting an acre of wheat with a binder and threshing from the shock with a stationary thresher; from three to four hours when the crop is harvested with a header and thresher with a stationery thresher; and an average of three-fourths of an hour when the combined harvester-thresher is used.

VACATION TIME

This month of August is the one month of the whole year which has no legal holidays of general observence in it. But in another sense, it is the great holiday month.

Everybody who can take a vacation tries to take it in the summer, and August is the time when people whose homes and work are in the cities get away as far and as fast as they can from the heat and noise.

The vacation habit has become so widespread in America that it is practically universal. There are few, if any, business houses or manufacturing establishments which do not give all employees some sort of a summer vacation. The general rule is two weeks with pay for all who have been with the concern a year or more, one week for those who have been with it less than a year. Uncle Sam is more generous. All employees in the Federal Civil Service get 30 days vacation with full pay.

One thing which business has discovered is that vacations pay. Few persons can stand the unremitting grind of 52 weeks of work without relaxation, or if they can stand it they do not take it kindly. In health accumulated for the rest of the year vacations pay dividends to employers as well as to employees.

The automobile has extended the range of vacation roaming inland, while fast steamships and low rates for ocean travel make it possible even for those who have only a fortnight free from business to run across to Europe and back. By taking advantage of the customary Saturday half-holiday it is possible for a worker in New York to sail for Europe at noon on Saturday, arriving at Cherbourg the following Thursday, reaching Paris that night, then to spend a solid week in touring France, Italy and Switzerland and catch a boat out of Cherbourg the following Wednesday morning, returning to New York in time to be at his desk again on the following Monday morning, having taken exactly two weeks' vacation.

There are those to whom vacation means merely a change of scene, others to whom it means nothing but rest, others who find in vacation an opportunity to pursue some special sport or outdoor interest. But to everybody a vacation of some sort has passed out of the class of luxuries, so far as the American people are concerned, and become a necessity.

WEATHER FORECASTING

Revolution in the present methods of weather forecasting is predicted by H. H. Clayton of the Smithsonian Institution, who foresees that forecasting of pressure and temperature will soon be made in much the same way that ocean tides are now predicted, except that the periods used will be solar periods rather than lunar periods and will need to be treated in a special way owing to changes in phase and amplitude. He predicts that processes will be simplified and machinery like the tidal machines will be introduced in order to handle the immense amount of data which will be needed for world-wide forecasts, or even for forecasts over a large area like the United States.

Results of twenty years research on the relation of the sun's activity to atmospheric changes are condensed in a publication of 49 pages issued by the Smithsonian. Complicated pulses of the sun's radiation occur both as long-period changes in terms of years and also as shorter variations of only a few days duration, as shown by Doctor C. G. Abbott, chief of the Smithsonian, and his associates. The pulses of the sun's radiation, Mr. Clayton show, are attended by variations and atmospheric pressure, which increases the contrasts in pressure and speed up the circulation of the atmosphere. When solar activity increases, the pressure falls in the equatorial region, rises in middle latitudes, and falls in the polar regions. The regularity of these changes is interfered with by the distribution of land and water and by the seasonal changes, so that the rate of progression of the atmospheric waves is greatly complicated.

Mr. Clayton's method of forecasting is by means of these periodic vibrations in the sun and atmosphere. An analysis of such periodic terms in the weather at any point on the earth would make it possible to project the periodic terms ahead to any length of time desired. Unfortunately there are variations in the amplitude and phase of the periods, and it is therefore necessary to redetermine the periodic terms at short intervals and to limit the time in advance which they are made to cover. When these inversions and displacements in the periodic term become calculable, this method of forecasting will, Mr. Clayton thinks, probably replace all others. Already considerable progress has been made along this line.

The Way of Life By BRUCE BARTON

NO ANSWER

The traffic light flashed red, and a big car stopped short. The car behind it brushed the front car's fender. Nothing of any importance. Just a bump.

Instantly, the driver of the first car was on the pavement. No one could bump him with impunity. He'd show the world.

I stopped to watch the performance, and the action of the other driver gave me a smile. Mild and innocent, he sat. He did not turn his head. He never said a word.

When the traffic light flashed green he stepped on the gas and moved away. His angry accuser had to climb back into his driver's seat, and before he could get going angry horns were blowing all around him.

He had had the satisfaction of his outburst, but the silent man won.

Years ago I received a very bitter letter. The writer was wrong in his facts and unjustified in his tone.

I carried the letter around in my pocket. Several times I started to dictate a hot reply. Then I would think of something meaner and decide to wait and try again.

On the third morning I had an inspiration. "The most paralyzing answer I can send to this man is no answer at all", I said to myself. "What is he doing all this time? Looking eagerly in every mail to find my letter. Planning out in his mind the things he will say in reply. Mentally lashing me to the mast.

"And I am going to disappoint him. I'm going to leave him there all bottled up, stewing in his own juice".

Peace came over me. I never thought of the man again.

It's not an original idea. John D. Rockefeller, in his younger days, was working away at his desk one afternoon when a man rushed into the office and began to denounce him in violent terms.

Mr. Rockefeller leaned back and listened as if to a story of fascinating interest. He did not utter a word.

Presently the man exhausted himself, and walked out, looking rather foolish. Mr. Rockefeller quietly picked up his pen and went on with his work.

There is a very wise old verse which reads: "The meek shall inherit the earth".

Is it true? Look around you. The meek do not make a spectacular showing. They lose many opportunities to announce their rights, and defend their honor, and show what tough fellows they are.

But they certainly do inherit.

SAUL—A MAN OF GREAT ABILITY WHO FAILED

I Samuel 9:15-27; 10:1; 19:9-12; 28:31

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Character study is always of interest. Opposites in qualities are in all of us. The strife between good and evil was especially marked in Saul, who had everything in his favor at the start but made a most ignominious ending. The few verses indicated above are merely suggestive. Read all in I Samuel from chapter eight to the end of the book. Samuel had been the representative of Jehovah among the Israelites but the people, for the sake of being in style with the surrounding nations, wanted a king.

Everyone who has lost something valuable can enter into the spirit of the search for the asses of Kish. Saul the son was sent out with a servant and the hireling might have made a far better king. This young man suggests approach to Samuel, the man who is on speaking terms with God, and meets each objection that Saul puts forth. There are many interesting details about the sacrifice that is booked for that day and how the tender morsels of meat are set before the young man who is enroute to the kingship. The anointing the next day is in private but a formal induction into office takes place at Gilgal.

The modest lad is found among the baggage when he is sought for at the time of the casting of lots. But that is the last commendable trait that can be indicated. He certainly made good in his first battle under the favor of the Lord, but the people soon had reason to change from shouting to groaning. When the Philistines came with their challenge, which was voiced by Goliath the giant, Saul was ready to promise a reward to anyone who would kill the boaster, but did not suggest that the honor of trying be accorded to him. David was the victor and the breach between the men started when the maidens, after the victory, sang that Saul had slain his thousands and David tens of thousands. Jealousy was the undoing of this man who had so much in the midst of which to be both happy and thankful.

Melancholy was a custom with the king. Instead of snapping out of it, as we would say today, he sought to be soothed as David harped for him. Big heart anger was seeking for mastery at the same time, for already Saul "eyed David" in his miserable jealousy. Anyone that cultivates jealousy is nursing a monster into growth and the outcome may be murder such as Saul attempted when he hurled his javelin at David.

Two specific sins must be noted in approaching the downfall. Both were acts of direct disobedience. One was in the nature of impatience. David was assured of victory against the Philistines at Michmash but he was told to wait until Samuel came with a sacrifice unto the Lord. Saul could not be patient beyond a week and then sought to offer his own burnt and peace sacrifices. Sentence was pronounced against him for this. Again when going against the Amelekites, the king was told not to take any spoil for a triumphal procession. Instead of obeying he saved Agag and much for a feast in which he expected to be acclaimed the victor. Then Samuel declared another profound truth which is equally good for all of us today: "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams".

The end came at the battle of Mount Gilboa when the Philistines were the victors. Saul wanted to be killed by his armor bearer who refused. Then the king ignominiously took his own life when he fell forward on his sword. Saul might have developed true greatness but he would not. The Golden Text has its most significant lesson for all: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—I Corinthians 10:12.

HUMORETTES

"Yes", said the fat man, "my size doesn't worry me, because everywhere I walk around, people laugh at me, and that makes me feel small".

The new hardware clerk prided himself on always having a snappy comeback.

"Do you keep refrigerators?" the timid-looking woman inquired quietly.

"No" he snapped, "we sell them".

"Anyway", she said, as she strolled toward the door, "you'll keep the one you were going to sell me. Good morning!"

"What is the name of your car?"

"I call her 'Shasta,.".

"Because she's a 'daisy'?"

"No; because she has to have gas, she has to have oil, she has to have air, she has to have something all the time."

Young Husband: "It seems to me, my dear, that these pancakes are rather heavy".

His Bride: "Then I'm afraid you' e a poor judge, for the cookbook says they are light and feathery."

IN THE Radio STUDIOS WITH ALBERT ZUGSMITH JR

Guy Lombardo, the orchestra leader, was playing golf the other afternoon, when his opponent pointed to one of the players behind him.

"See that fellow", said Lombardo's companion. "He's worth five million dollars, and would you believe it, he can't even write his own name."

Just then the player referred to, smacked his ball a wallop and shouted "Fore".

"Well", said Guy, "anyway he can count."

The roar of the surf will be brought direct to the ears of the radio listeners when WPG, Atlantic City, completes the installation of a "mike", suspended over the waves, underneath the Million Dollar Pier. Ted Weems, Guy Lombardo, Sleepy Hall, Charlie Dornberger, Milt Shaw, and other famous orchestras will be heard from Atlantic City's ocean piers through WPG (which, incidently, stands for World's Play Ground) and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Ray Perkins, the "Old Topper" of the National Broadcasting Company, is using railroad tricks in the studios. Recently he gave the production man on his program three flags, green, red and yellow. If the program is running on schedule the yellow flag is displayed; the green flag means "speed up" and the red flag means "slow down, you're running ahead of schedule". Clever boy, Ray.

Fred Hufsmith, NBC tenor, is slight of build and very youthful in appearance — embarrassingly youthful it seems. For Freddie was with his accompanist in the lobby of the Hotel Commodore in New York recently, waiting to sing at a fashionable afternoon concert in the grand ballroom, when an important-looking society woman, bearing all the earmarks of a committee chairlady, dashed up to him and said, "Boy, page Frederic Hufsmith for me".

STATUE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS

With the acceptance by the Congress of the United States of a statue of Jefferson Davis, and its installation in Statuary Hall in the National Capitol in Washington, it would seem that the last vestige of animosity born of the war between the states must have passed away.

Sixty-nine years ago Davis became the titular head of the Confederate States of America. He had served as Secretary of War in President Buchanan's cabinet, and on one of the abutments of Cabin John bridge in Washington, carrying the Washington Aqueduct, a blank space appears where his name was chiselled out when the South seceded! That was a war gesture, as important then and as silly in perspective, as our ban upon teaching German in the public schools, when we were at war a dozen years ago.

All the old bitterness may never die. There is still a considerable body of Jacobites in Canada who hold that the present King of England has no right to his throne and that an obscure European nobleman of the Stuart line is the rightful heir of James II. But nobody takes them seriously, any more than anyone now takes seriously those who try to keep our old sectional enmity alive.

Sowing winter wheat on the latest safe date in the fall helps to prevent injury from the scab disease, which reduces the yields and lowers the quality of much wheat in the central states and eastward. The seed should be thoroughly clean, graded and treated. The scab fungus also attacks corn, and in regions where scab flourishes wheat should not be sown after corn unless the stalks are removed and the stubbles plowed completely under.

All little children need a daily nap.

The Scrap Books

MY LOVE

By James Russell Lowell

Not as all other women are
Is she that to my soul is dear;
Her glorious fancies come from far,
Beneath the silver evening star,
And yet her heart is ever near.

Great feelings hath she of her own,
Which lesser souls may never know;
God giveth them to her alone,
And sweet they are as any tone
Wherewith the wind may choose to blow.

Yet in herself she dwelleth not,
Although no home were half so fair;
No simpliest duty is forgot,
Life hath no dim and lowly spot
That doth not in her sunshine share.

She doeth little kindnesses,
Which most leave undone, or despise:
For naught that sets one heart at ease,
And giveth happiness or peace,
Is low-esteemed in her eyes.

She hath no scorn of common things,
And, though she seem of other birth,
Round us her heart entwines and clings,
And patiently she folds her wings
To tread the humble path of earth.

Blessing she is: God made her so,
And deeds of week-day holiness
Fall from her noiseless as the snow,
Nor hath she ever chanced to know
That aught were easier than to bless.

She is most fair, and thereunto
Her life doth rightly harmonize;
Feeling or thought that was not true
Ne'er made less beautiful the blue
Unclouded heaven of her eyes.

She is a woman: one in whom
The spring-time of her childish years
Hath never lost its fresh perfume,
Though knowing well that life hath room
For many blights and many tears.

I loved her with a love as still
As a broad river's peaceful might,
Which, by high tower and lowly mill,
Seems following its own wayward will,
And yet doth ever flow aright.

And on its full, deep breast serene,
Like quiet isles my duties lie;
It flows around them and between,
And makes them fresh and fair and green,
Sweet homes wherein to live and die.

ANOTHER PHASE OF HENRY FORD'S CHARACTER

I visited Henry Ford's great plant at Dearborn the other day. As I came out of one of the buildings I saw a rope stretched across the brick pathway.

"We'll have to walk on the grass," said my guide. "There's a kildeer's nest down that path. Mr Ford saw it the other day and had us block off the path. The kildeer, you know will leave its nest and let its young ones die if it is disturbed."

I didn't know that fact of natural history, not having been brought up in the prairie country where the kildeer flourishes, but as I looked down the path and saw the mother bird hovering over the nest in a low bush I felt that I had got a glimpse of another phase of Henry Ford's character.

FLYING

The flying season is just now at its height. Roger Q. Williams flew the 1,560 miles from New York to Bermuda and back without a stop, between daylight and dark, or in 17 hours. John and Kenneth Hunter, flying over Chicago, beat the endurance record for continuous flight, 420 hours, on the same day.

Still comparatively few in America have ever been up in an airplane and fewer still, proportionately, use planes for transportation. Just how rapidly we are becoming nationally "air-minded" nobody can tell exactly, but not as rapidly as the aviation folk hoped when Lindbergh made his historical flight.

It takes a lot of time to change the habits and point of view of the human race.

Robertson Appointed Director Of Laboratory Dept. Agriculture

Appointment of A. H. Robertson as director of the State Food Laboratory of the Department of Agriculture and Markets has been announced by Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke. Dr. Robertson, who has had extended experience in chemical and bacteriological research, succeeds Dr. W. B. White, who was named head of a similar bureau in the United States Department of Agriculture and who has recently taken up his duties in Washington.

Dr. Robertson is a graduate of the Owego Free Academy, and obtained the degrees of Bachelor of Science Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy from Cornell University. He served in the World War in 1918 in the San Mihiel salient and in the Meuse and Argonne offensives; was City Bacteriologist of Geneva in 1920-21 and Assistant Bacteriologist at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station from 1921 to 1926. Among the papers prepared by him at this time were the following: "Sanitary Milk Production with Milking Machines", "Bacteria Associated with Milking Machines", and "Bacteria that Survive Pasteurization."

Dr. Robertson was at the Vermont Experiment Station, at Burlington, as Bacteriologist from 1926 to 1928, and at this time was the author of "Bacteria that Grow During Pasteurization", "Accuracy and Practicability of Bacteria Tests as Applied to Milk Sanitation."

In October, 1928, he came to the Department of Agriculture and Markets as Bacteriologist to take up more especially the supervision of the count of bacteria in milk. Milk is sold generally on the butter fat basis, but in some cases it is sold on the basis of the bacteria count and a permium is paid for what is called "low count" milk.

As director of the State Food Laboratory of the Department Dr. Robertson will have charge of the analyses of samples of food taken by inspectors of the Dairy and Food Bureau for the protection of the consumer against adulteration and misbranding.

THE Fast-Freezing KELVINATOR

the new, better help in food preparation

KELVINATOR freezes desserts faster and more successfully than any other domestic refrigerator. That is just one of the results of its wonderful 4-Way Cold.

Now, for the first time, automatic refrigeration—as developed exclusively by Kelvinator—becomes of major importance in the preparation of foods.

With the new and greater Kelvinator you can always have ready those dainty and delicious dishes which—lacking Kelvinator's help—are so difficult to prepare.

More than this—Kelvinator's "below-freezing" Cold Storage Compartment—in de luxe models—enables you to keep these desserts or salads for days at a time. The same compartment is an ideal storage place for extra ice; for game, fish, meats—and for the frozen fruits, vegetables, meats and fish which are now coming into general use.

One of our representatives is as near as your telephone or visit our showroom for a demonstration of these new features.

Everyone can now own a Kelvinator—on Easy Terms

The model Kelvinator you require may be purchased on easy terms through Kelvinator's attractive ReDisCo monthly budget plan. Details upon request.

Only KELVINATOR Gives

4-way cold

1 More Ice—because Kelvinator's ice capacity—size for size—is greater.

2 Super-Fast Freezing—because of Iso-Thermic Tubes—an exclusive Kelvinator feature.

3 Cold Storage—in de luxe models, a large compartment kept always at below-freezing cold.

4 Scientific Refrigeration—40° to 50°—in main food compartment—safe and correct cold for all foods.

All these four degrees of cold are maintained constantly, separately, automatically. 1128

Colony Beavers Located Nearby

A colony of beevers have taken up their residence on Tuscarora Creek not far from Addison. The animals have built a dam and are apparently in happy possession of the pond in which they will doubtless build winter quarters if they are left undisturbed.

It is believed that the beavers have migrated to this section from the vicinity of Coudersport. Probably no living resident can remember the time when beavers could be found in this section, but like deer they are well protected with game laws and providing some vandals do not interfere with their habits this colony may be expected to thrive and multiply. They are shy creatures and do not ordinarily locate near the habitats of humans, although cases have been known where they became somewhat domesticated.

Addison sportsmen are determined that the colony shall be allowed to pursue their habits undisturbed. The land in the vicinity of the colony has been posted according to law and every measure will be taken to protect these beavers. General cooperation is urgently requested by those interested in the matter that the colony may continue to stay and multiply. In the course of time if the animals are left alone they will become acclimated and then it will be possible to watch their activities without danger of frightening them away. Every true lover of nature will surely do his or her best to protect the colony, and in that way perform a public service which will be well remembered when the day comes that beavers are again plentiful in this section. A number of places where at one time the animals were practically extinct, they have been protected and now have multiplied until they are again taken for fur in limited numbers.

Shears are very useful in salad making. Use them for shredding the lettuce leaves or other greens too large to be left whole and often to cut fruits and vegetables.

Alton and Gladys Sherwood of Northrup Hill, were business callers here Tuesday evening.

Miss Dorothy Lewis was seriously injured in a runaway accident which occurred as she was raking ray on her father's farm. The rake tongue broke frightening the horses so they ran away, dragging Miss Lewis beneath their feet. It was found at the Bath Hospital that Miss Lewis had sustained a broken collar bone besides being badly bruised.

WAR ON WEEDS

By Bob Adams

Seeds that pusley parents sprinkle
Sleep a while like Rip Van Winkle,
Nineteen forty seven or eight,
They will likely germinate.

That is more truth than poetry too. At the Michigan experiment station, W. J. Beal found that the seeds of purslane, which I always call pusley except when I am dressed up, would germinate after being buried thirty years. Charlock or wild mustard was found to do the same. Let us take Beal's word for it and not repeat the experiment in your garden or mine.

Weeds are most easily killed in the seedling stage, but if any have escaped you and reached maturity they should be removed before they make seed. Old weeds should be burned as immature seed often ripens even after the parent plant is pulled.

If the garden is cultivated in the fall, some weed seeds germinate and are winter killed before they have time to seed. Strategy is useful in the war on weeds as in other wars.

"Manna-hatin," The Story of New York

Old Financial Institution Tells How The City Grew To Be The Commercial Metropolis Of The World

Reprinted as a serial by courtesy of P. A. Rowley, President, The Manhattan Company, New York

Chapter XXII.
THE FIRST PARADE

THE city's new life brought political opportunities. For a long time the State Assembly under Governor George Clinton met here, and in 1784 Congress, with Richard Henry Lee as its president, selected New York for its meeting-place. Mayor James Duane at once offered the City Hall, standing in Wall Street on a part of the present Sub-Treasury Building site and a part of Nassau Street, for a Federal Hall, and here the Congress met in January of the following year. Wall Street, once a place of fine residences and shaded gardens, now had reason to consider itself the most important business street of the nation.

Commerce returned. The "Empress of China" from New York was the first vessel to carry the American flag to Asia. Business was on the move. A General Society of Merchants and Tradesmen banded together, and by 1876 thirty trades were represented in its membership. The Bank of New York was established under the guidance of Alexander Hamilton. The old Chamber of Commerce applied for a renewal of its charter. Wall Street was beginning to be a power.

Opportunity took other forms as well, and King's College for years used as a soldiers' hospital, became "Columbia." DeWitt Clinton, the governor's nephew, who was passing through the city to enroll at Princeton, was persuaded to become the first student, and Reverend William Cochrane was appointed instructor.

Meanwhile, the nation's leaders realized that it was necessary to work out a sounder form of government. Business required it, and in 1786, a convention of colonial representatives was summonded at Annapolis to deal with commercial problems. Hamilton went as a delegate and helped to provide for another convention in Philadelphia the following year, at which he again represented New York. The final fruit of this second gathering was the Constitution of the United States.

Now began a hot debate between two parties: the Federalists led by Hamilton and Madison, and the Anti-Federalists, led by Clinton and Burr. New York City was overwhelmingly Federalist, which means that it favored the creation of a strong central government. This would be important for commercial welfare.

On September 17, 1787, the Federal Convention, meeting in Philadelphia, completed its work of drafting the Federal Constitution, and its final revision was entrusted to another New Yorker, Gouverneur Morris. Washington, as presiding officer, sent a draft of it at once to the Congress of the United States, sitting in New York, which, in turn, sent it to the several states for ratification. A New York State Convention at Poughkeepsie debated long and earnestly before ratifying it in July, 1788. In the meanwhile, ten other states had signed on the dotted line, and New York City, the stronghold of the Federalist party, was fairly bursting at the delay. Fresh paint gleamed on its walls and fences, and Major L'Enfant was remodeling the old City Hall building into a dignified capitol, with Doric columns, marble stairways, and a wide balcony facing Broad Street—a building fit for the first meeting place of Congress under the new Federal Constitution. At the City Tavern on Broadway and at Murray's Wharf distinguished visitors were coming and going almost daily, in anticipation of the great events about to happen. Prosperity had come back to New York, but material prosperity could not satisfy the city with its ideals of government hanging in the balance; it determined to force action at Poughkeepsie.

Accordingly, on July 23, 1788, New York held its first great parade. A committee of citizens planned the various divisions of this procession, which included over five thousand people and stretched out for a mile and a half in length. Every trade and profession, every age and class represented in New York took part, appropriately costumed. Escorted by military bands, there were divisions of marching clergymen, Columbia students, judges, butchers, bakers, brewers and candle-stick makers. Great floats rolled by, demonstrating various mechanical trades; a printing-press ran off the words of a commemorative song which was distributed to the crowds; coopers made barrels; and bakers exhibited an achievement labeled "Federal Loaf," marked in slices for the states. No man was too important or too dignified to march that day. Noah Webster took his place among the publishing crafts, the Chamber of Commerce turned out in a body, and the last division was filled with gentlemen of no profession and by noted visitors and strangers. The great feature, however, was the huge "float," drawn by ten horses, representing the Federal ship "Hamilton" under full sail, which halted at Bowling Green and elsewhere on the route to fire a salute of thirteen guns from her deck. The procession was reviewed by the president and members of Congress at the fort. The "animated joy of the citizens of New York" was expressed along the line of progress through the crowded streets to the Bayard estate (near the present Grand Street) where tables had been laid beneath the trees for six thousand people.

In the time of strife and jealousy, New York rose as a unit, and spoke with power. Its voice carried to Poughkeepsie, and on the following Saturday, the State Convention ratified the Constitution of the United States. Then, on March 4, 1789, the new Congress began to assemble at Federal Hall. By April 6, there had been cast a unanimous electoral vote for George Washington as the first President of the United States.

The new New York — the free American New York—already had had two great days: November 25, 1783, when the British had evacuated the city, and July 23, 1788, when the mighty Federalist procession had proclaimed New York's support for the Constitution. Now it was about to have a third, a significant and joyous day; for a new government was preparing to take its place among the powers of the world, and the beloved Washington was on his way here to be inaugurated as its first President. Great were the preparations! Samuel Osgood's fine house at No. 3 Cherry Street (already used by the presidents of Congress) was redecorated for the Executive Mansion, and by April, a barge about fifty feet long had been constructed for the trip from Elizabethtown to Murray's Wharf at the foot of Wall Street, where carpeted stairs awaited the Presidential landing.

FRANK E. SMITH

Frank E. Smith, aged 64 years, died yesterday morning at 5:14 o'clock at his home in Corning following an illness of only a little over a week. Mr. Smith was stricken with a sunstroke while working on his farm on Orr Hill Saturday, August 2. He was able to return to his home that evening but complained of a severe pain in his head. His condition was not considered serious at first but he did not respond to medical aid and grew steadily worse.

Mr. Smith was born in Avoca, December 24, 1865, the son of Henry F. and Jerusha Dawson Smith. He was married to Maude F. Smith of Woodhull, December 31, 1899 at Wellsville. For many years he was a prosperous farmer on Orr Hill. Fifteen months ago Mr. and Mrs. Smith moved to Corning where Mr. Smith accepted the post of sexton in the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mr. Smith was possessed of that rare gift of personality that enabled him to make friends with all those with whom he came in contact. He possessed a vast fund of human sympathy, together with a genuine interest in his fellow man made him beloved throughout the countryside which was his home for so many years and also among the members and attendants of the church to which he came as sexton.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one son, Arlington F., of Nelliston; one sister, Mrs. Eva P. Battin of Addison; one brother, William Smith of Hornell.

The funeral will be held this Thursday afternoon from his late home, 55 East Third street, Corning. The Rev. J. Harrison Olmstead, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, will officiate. Interment in Addison.

Move to Wipe Out "Athlete's Foot" Menace in Cities of United States

ENOUGH tiny parasites to infect every person in the United States with athlete's foot are lurking on the glass plate shown above. They are being examined by a New York bacteriologist. The plate contains billions of Tinea Trichophytons, which cause the foot malady, a form of ringworm, and these parasites were cultivated from a single specimen overnight.

Widespread evidence of this disease, which has caused some schools to close and has indicated that an outbreak of it might come to any village or city of the United States, has caused medical men in all parts of the country to study means by which it may be eradicated. Constant use of antiseptic is being urged as a means to aid the fight against this age-old malady which has recently taken a more serious appearance in this country. The photograph was taken in the Pease Laboratories in New York where scientists are constantly studying the disease in an effort to control it.

Old Age Pensions To Help Only Those In Real Need

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 12—That assistance soon to be given to the aged under the new article of the Public Welfare Law entitled, "Security Against Old Age Want", will be granted as a relief allowance based on the need of the individual and not as a pension to all persons 70 years old, or over, irrespective of need, is indicated in a statement issued by Charles H. Johnson, Commissioner of the State Department of Social Welfare.

Applications for grants under the statute will be received on and after September 1, and actual allowances will be made beginning January 1, next.

Commissioner Johnson has just transmitted to the county and city Commissioners of Public Welfare throughout the State, the rules and regulations which have been adopted by the State Department of Social Welfare to govern the administration of the provisions of the new law. Application blanks are now being printed and before September 1 will be in the hands of county and city Commissioners of Public Welfare, from whom they may be obtained by applicants for allowances. The Department has also prepared a folder of information as to who are eligible for relief under the law.

Who is Eligible for Relief

Old age relief may be given under the new law to a person who:

1. Has attained the age of seventy years and is unable to support himself either in whole or in part; and has no children or other person able to support him and responsible under the law for his support.

2. Is a citizen of the United States.

3. Has been a resident of the State of New York for at least ten years immediately preceding his application for old age relief.

4. Has resided in and been an inhabitant of the county or city in which the application is made for at least one year immediately preceding the date of application.

5. Is not, because of his physical or mental condition, in need of continued institutional care.

Need is First Qualification

Commissioner Johnson in his statement emphasized the fact that the first qualification for old age relief is that the applicant must need it, and that age, residence, etc., are subordinate to the major issue of whether the applicant needs relief.

"In order to avoid misunderstanding and disappointment when the law goes into effect", said Commissioner Johnson, "it is important to realize that need is the first and essential qualification under the law. The relief grants are not 'pensions', available for all persons 70 years of age and over, but are allowances to be given only to those who are in financial distress, have no children or other relatives able to provide for them, or who are ill or disabled in such a way that they cannot better be cared for in a suitable public home or hospital. The grants are intended only for persons living in their own homes or in the homes of relatives or friends, and will not be given to persons living continuously in institutions. It is important that these features of the law should be understood in order to prevent the mistake which some would-be applicants are likely to make in filing application for relief which upon investigation will show that the applicant is ineligible."

Cost Might Reach $12,000,000

The Department states that an estimate with respect to the number of aged persons eligible for relief under the law, made by the New York Commission on Old Age Security, which made a survey of the State and drafted the new law, is on the basis of approximately one eligible person for every 200 persons in the State. However, this ratio will vary in different parts of the State, it is said, and particularly in urban as compared with rural communities. It has been found that there are proportionately fewer aged persons in the large population centers than in the smaller communities and rural sections. There is no statistical information available on which to determine the number of persons eligible under the law.

Should there be 50,000 eligible applicants", said Commissioner Johnson, "and an average of $20 per month be granted, the entire cost will be $12,000,000 per year, and claims will be made by the counties and cities to the State Department for one-half of the sum expended both for relief and for the necessary administrative expenses."

Much Interest in Allowance

The Department of Social Welfare has already been deluged with inquiries concerning the new law, which is considered a marked advance in the social legislation in this State. To administer the statute, the Department has created a new Division of Old Age Security headed by Richard W. Wallace, as Assistant Commissioner. Mr. Wallace has been in the Department for 25 years.

Will Investigate Each Case Carefully

In his communication to Commissioners of Public Welfare, Commissioner Johnson emphasized the necessity for careful investigation of all applicants and urged the employment of competent investigators in all counties and cities of the State, one-half the expense of which will be paid out of State funds, provided the manner in which the work is carried on in the several counties and cities is in accordance with the rules adopted by the State Department.

The rules require that Commissioners of Public Welfare shall thoroughly familiarize themselves with the requirements of the law and the rules of the department with reference to: the adequacy of old age relief provided; the necessary procedure involved; economy in expenditures of funds; and, conditions under which partial reimbursement may be made by the State of funds expended by counties or cities.

The rules require that applicants be given "considerate attention by the Commissioner of Public Welfare and his representatives and extended courteous assistance and advice, when needed, insofar as in the power of such officials."

Allowances Based on Need

No fixed amount has been set for the allowance grants, but the rules require that they "shall be made with due regard to the needs and conditions of the respective applicants", and also that when practicable payments shall be made by check to the individual recipients "at such dates not less frequently than once per month, as will in the judgment of the Commissioner of Public Welfare be for the best interest of the recipient."

The rules further provide that approval by the State Department of any claim of a public welfare district for partial reimbursement by the State will only be given if the public officials of counties and cities meet the requirements contained in the law and the rules of the department "with respect to reports, records, investigations and methods of administration."

Commissioners of Public Welfare are required to make an investigation of each application in a thorough manner and notify the applicant and the State Department of Social Welfare of his decision in each case. Such notification so far as practicable is required within thirty days after receipt of the application itself.

Mr. Johnson stated that in a number of the counties and cities of the State the appropriation authorities have authorized the appointment by Commissioners of Public Welfare of investigators and office assistants to handle the large bulk of work which may be expected immediately after September 1, when applications may be received by county and city officials in the three or four months prior to January 1, 1931, when payments of grants will actually begin.

The problem of choosing street costumes that are comfortable, appropriate, smart—and withal reasonable in price—should be a fairly simple one. This agreeable state of affair has in large measure been brought about by the return to favor of the jacket suit, which always has certain advantages over the coat and dress or one-piece dress ensemble.

In planning your wardrobe you cannot do better than to select some sort of silk suit. You will have a variety of light-weight rough weave silks, either in solid color or in one of the new colored prints.

The picture shows a silk suit, made on simple lines, the waist drawn in with a leather belt.

DEFORESTATION IS A MENACE TO FISH LIFE

Deforestation is charged with the responsibility for much of the poor fishing in waters where such game fish as brook trout were formerly plentiful. The statement is made by Dr. W. C. Kendall and Professor Wilford A. Dence, of the Roosevelt Wild Life Station, in a bulletin recently issued, on a survey of the fishes of the Cranberry Lake region in the Adirondacks.

The booklet is published by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University. The bulletin states, "One of the most important agencies effecting harmful changes in conditions of streams, lakes and ponds, is deforestation. Among the many evil effects of deforestation are changed conditions and exposure of soil, rendering it less retentive of water, and thus subjecting the streams to sudden freshets and causing the fluctuations in volume, particularly lowering the water level in dry season. Both quantity and quality of food supply of trout is decreased, especially that afforded by insects. The slash left by lumbering operations often encumbers the streams and in combination with freshets destroys pools by filling them with sand, mud and debris; and spawning beds are destroyed. Furthermore, slash left upon the ground becomes a source of destructive fires. Forest fires not only destroy the woods and vegetable growth but the soil also, and consequently subject the streams to greater liability to floods affecting the spawning beds, the food supply and poisoning the water by the leaching of the ashes.

"Should it be allowed to continue, then, rather than closing the brooks, it would be far better to open them to the public with no restrictions and let the people get all the fish there are in the region, so that they may at least derive some benefit from the money thus far expended in attempting to arrest the decline of trout."

FREEZE FRUIT JUICES FOR SUMMER DESSERTS

Ices Easy to Prepare Says State College of Home Economics.

Fruit ices for summer desserts are easy to prepare, wholesome and refreshing, according to the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell University. They are made simply by freezing a mixture of fruit juices, water and sugar or syrup for sweetening.

Peaches, cherries, berries, plums and other fresh fruits in season as well as canned fruits and juices or even cooked dried fruits may be used.

Ices should be frozen with the proportion of eight parts of ice to one of salt. Unlike ice cream, they are best of they are not allowed to stand packed long after freezing. Freeze until stiff and serve.

For an especially smooth consistency in ices white corn syrup may be added. Add the syrup to the sugar and water, cook all together. Add the fruit juices and thoroughly blend and cool. Never add the mixture to thefreezer while warm. Precooling cuts down the actual freezing period and gives a better product.

Raspberry ice is refreshing as a hot weather dessert. To make about two quarts of ice, press two quarts of raspberries through a coarse sieve, boil three and one-fourth cups of sugar and a quart of water together until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved, and cool. Add the raspberry juice and three tablespoons of lemon juice. Pour into a freezer and freeze, using eight parts of ice to one of salt.

Banana ice has an especially smooth texture. Cook one cup of sugar, one-half cup of corn syrup and one cup of water until the mixture makes a fine thread. Remove from the fire, add a cup of water, a cup of orange juice, two tablespoons of lemon juice and two bananas which have been pressed through a coarse sieve. Cool and freeze. One cup of heavy cream added just before freezing makes a delicious variation.

VACATIONISTS SPEND MILLIONS IN CANADA

Canada is becoming increasingly popular as a place for Americans to go on their vacation trips. That is not all on account of the ease with which one may get a drink across the border, compared with this side. Those interested in the quaint and historical find much to fascinate them in the old French settlements in Quebec and the historical coast of Nova Scotia. Fishermen, mountaineers and motorists, as well as ordinary vacationists, from the United States spent $289,000,000 in Canada last year, the Department of Commerce estimates, while Canadian tourists spent about $91,000,000 on this side of the border. Considering that Canada has less than 10 percent as many people as we have, that is a pretty good showing for our northern neighbors.

Severe burning of pasture lands and widespread damage to the ensilage corn crop as well as scarcity of water in many sections have materially increased milk production costs", said J. D. Miller, vice president of the Dairymen's League, in a statement announcing the higher prices.

"New York requires ample supplies of pure, safe milk. During the last two weeks production has been shrinking rapidly. Condenseries and cheese factories have been shut down and their supplies diverted to the fluid market. Low production has resulted primarily from feeding conditions. Dairymen must feed hay and grain to stimulate production. Drought conditions in the west are making feeds more costly. In raising milk prices the Dairymen's League acts to provide farmers a return for their milk that will enable them to feed and care for their cattle in the manner necessary to increase supplies so that the cities may have enough of the high quality milk they require".

Great Meeting of Grange People To be Held in this State

Announcement is made that between now and the latter part of October at least 30 sessions of the New York State Grange are to be held, covering all sections of the state, to give members of that organization a chance to take the Sixth Degree, so they can go to Rochester and on November 14th take the Seventh Degree at the record-making session of the National Grange scheduled for that city.

For these special Sixth Degree meetings of the State Grange convenient centers will be selected by State Master Fred J. Freestone, and at each of these sessions a genuine rally day will be scheduled, with the conferring of the degree the crowning feature. Inasmuch as the National Grange confers the Seventh Degree (the highest in the Grange) but once a year, and as the National Grange has not met in New York State since 1918, there is great eagerness to be at Rochester for the big degree occasion in Masonic Temple all day, Friday, November 14.

It was early announced that one of the special State Grange sessions would be arranged in any county, during August, September or October, that would furnish a class of Sixth Degree candidates of 300 or more. Some counties will produce double that number but the record so far rests with Delaware County, which already has 302 applications signed up and advance fees paid, out of a total Grange membership of 1212. If this proportion is extended throughout the state, with a 130,000 membership, the size of the total Sixth Degree classes can be imagined—likewise the class for the Seventh Degree at Rochester!

Meanwhile Grange activity in every part of New York State is very pronounced. Six new Juvenile Granges have been organized during the past 30 days; five new Grange halls have been dedicated and several more in process; record attendance at County Pomona meetings and a total of Fifth Degree initiations running into the thousands; with a great number of outdoor field meetings, picnics and similar events—each made a rallying-point for the great Rochester event in November.

Thousands of Grange members and their friends will attend Grange Day exercises at the State Fair in Syracuse, Wednesday, September 3, when the principal address will be given by Louis J. Taber, Master of the National Grange, and one of the outstanding farm leaders of the present time.

Word comes from Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey and other nearby states, of a large delegation of Patrons to head for Rochester in November, while each of the New England states will send large quotas, numberless bus parties having already been organized to make the trip, in addition to all who will come by private car and on the special rates granted by all railroads leading into Rochester.

PLAN SATISFYING MEALS FOR-OUT-OF-DOORS PICNICS

Menu Can Be Attractive Even to Conscientious Objectors, Says College of Home Economics.

Picnic meals may, with a little care and foresight, be made attractive even to conscientious objectors, according to the New York State College of Home Economics. An adequate and well planned meal may be served over a campfire as well as at home, and will be eaten with greater enthusiasm, by the children.

The first requirement is satisfactory equipment. An elaborate picnic may be prepared on a portable stove, but it takes away from the informality of the campfire meal which is so attractive to all children and to most adults. The fundamental necessities for a meal cooked out-of-doors are a frying pan, water bottles, a cooking pail, a sharp knife, a long-handled fork and spoon, and a can and bottle opener. To supplement these simple utensils, every one can carry his own collapsible drinking cup, knife, fork and spoon.

With this equipment many variations in the menu are possible. Meats may range from the humble frankfurter, which may be primitively broiled on the end of a pointed stick to the aristocratic porterhouse steak, presenting along the way the possibilites of hamburg steaks, ham, bacon, mutton, lamb and pork chops, or chicken previously cooked at home, which may be rolled in flour and fried for the picnic meal.

Potatoes may be baked in the coals, boiled, fried or if previously cooked, they may be fried in bacon fat over the fire. Vegetables, either canned or fresh, are easily boiled and they are relished when accompanied by the scent of wood smoke. Mushrooms, onions and tomatoes are delicious when fried and served with steak, chops, bacon or eggs. Bacon is an especially useful campfire meat because the fat may be used in the preparation of other dishes. At a seashore picnic vegetables may be cooked in the salt water, and for many persons they will require no other seasoning.

Salads have their place on a picnic as well as at home. Lettuce, celery, cucumbers and other vegetables to be used in the salad may be carried in a glass jar with a few pieces of ice, and the dressing in another similar jar. Waldorf, cabbage and potato salads may be mixed at home and packed in jars, but juicy fruit or tomato salads are better if prepared on the spot.

Desserts for picnic meals should be light, simple and permit quick preparation. Fresh berries, sugared and packed in jars at home, bananas, canned pineapple, melons, grapes and even apples are all satisfactory desserts. Elaborate desserts are out of place around the campfire.

SUMMER CLOTHES NEED SKILLFUL LAUNDERING

Skillful laundering contributes to a well-dressed appearance in this season of light colored silks, cottons and linens, says the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell University. Laundering the new wash fabrics is simple but requires a knowledge of correct methods for success.

Silks should be washed in mild, thick, lukewarm suds. Squeeze the garment in the suds to remove the dirt. Never rub or apply a cake of soap directly to the fabric. Then rinse quickly several times in lukewarm water and squeeze dry. If the silk is fast-colored roll in three towels, one beneath, one on top and one inside the dress. Roll tightly and leave until the towels have absorbed enough of the moisture to allow the dress to be ironed.

If colors have a tendency to run, work rapidly leaving the garment in the towel as short a time as possible to absorb the excess moisture, and dry quickly. Care must be taken to keep the iron from becoming too hot; silk scorches readily.

Cotton and linen garments may be washed in warmer suds than silk, but the same care must be taken to rinse thoroughly. When colors run in these fabrics use cooler wash water, work rapidly and dry quickly. To give these garments a new, fresh appearance dip them in thin hot starch after rinsing. Do not roll colored garments when damp; this is especially dangerous if colors tend to run.

YOUTHFUL FARMERS ATTEND STATE FAIR

The young livestock division of the boys' and girls' department at the State Fair has grown to a point where the number and character of the entries approach the regular cattle show regarded as the best of the eastern states.

Prizes Offered For Fair Attendance

The following letter received August 2nd explains so fully and so well the prizes offered for attendance of Farm and Home Bureau members on Farm and Home Day at the State Fair that it seems best to reprint it, hoping that some further more definite plan may be made before the State Fair so that Steuben County may have a chance to compete with other counties for the generous cash prizes:

"Dear Home Bureau Manager:

We are urging this year that as many as possible of the Home Bureau Members attend the exhibits at the State Fair on Tuesday, September 2nd, Farm and Home Bureau Day. The exhibits present their best appearance at this time while they are fresh.

In order to encourage a better attendance on Farm and Home Bureau Day, the State Fair Commission, together with the State Federation of Home Bureaus has offered a sum of money to be divided into prizes for the best attendance, Farm and Home Day, September 2nd, 1930.

I. In order to more nearly equalize the varied distances from Syracuse, the state will be divided into zones as follows:

(1) Zone A—100 per cent of the attendance will be counted for the following counties: Suffolk, Nassau, Orange, Sullivan, Ulster, Rensselaer, Warren, Saratoga, Franklin and St. Lawrence.

(2) Zone B—90 per cent of the attendance will be counted for the following counties: Jefferson, Lewis, Otsego, Delaware, Chautauqua, Steuben, Allegany, Wyoming, Orleans, Livingston and Cattaraugus.

(3) Zone C—80 per cent of the attendance will be counted for the following counties: Broome, Chenango, Erie, Niagara, Genesee, Herkimer and Chemung.

(4) Zone D—75 per cent of the attendance will be counted for the following counties: Monroe, Ontario, Cortland, Tompkins, Tioga, Schuyler, Yates, Madison, Oswego, Oneida, Cayuga and Wayne.

(5) Zone E—50 per cent of the attendance will be counted for Onondaga County for the grand prize only.

II. Automobile tours and train loads—It is hoped that Farm and Home Bureaus will organize automobile tours, aided by the state police, and arrange for special cars on trains, thus making the trip to the State Fair a gala event and promoting acquaintances throughout the county.

III. Eligibility — Eligibility for contest is limited to Farm and Home Bureau members.

IV. Registration—Registration for contest is limited to Farm and Home Bureau members. Booths will be found about the grounds, the main booth being in Mrs. Miller's office in the Horticultural Building where Farm and Home Bureau exhibits are shown.

V. Prizes—$25.00 will be awarded to the county Home Bureau having the largest registration, in each of the four zones. $75.00 will be awarded as a grand prize to the county Home Bureau having the largest attendance for the day of any Home Bureau county in the state, according to the above zoning system.

Note: This contest is for Tuesday, September 2nd only.

Yours for the biggest attendance at Farm and Home Day in years.

Eileen Sehl Androus,
Secretary, Joint State Fair Com."

If your sheep, calves or pigs have a husky cough at this time of year, look out for lung-worms. Isolate infested animals and give them special care and feed. Put the animals on high, dry pasture, or put them up and feed dry feed. Give plenty of pure water and provide them with some kind of shade.

STATE PRODUCE IN NEW YORK CITY

Peas in Moderate Demand

New York, Aug. 8—New York State green peas were in moderate receipt again this morning, says the New York Office of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets. Offerings varied greatly in quality and condition and were sharply competed against by liberal supplies from western states. The demand was moderate and confined to the very best stock. Jobbing business on bushel baskets from this state was transacted from 75c to $1.50. The indicated production of peas for market this year, excluding the late crops in California upon which no report can be made as yet, is nearly 27 per cent greater than in 1929.

Tomatoes Firmer

Attractive quality, firm, ripe tomatoes met a better outlet at a slight price advance in a firmer market. Arrivals from the Hudson Valley are gradually increasing. Six basket carriers of the best stock changed hands at $2.00 to $3.00.

Pears Dull

The undertone of the market on Clapp's Favorite pears was again dull inasmuch as the demand was not sufficient to absorb the offerings. Sales on bushel baskets from the Hudson Valley were reported at $1.00 to $1.50. One year ago Clapp's Favorite pears sold at $2.00 to $3.35.

Live Poultry

Fowls were in light receipt and broilers in moderate supply at the wholesale live poultry market this morning. The demand was active for broilers at slightly higher prices and fair for fowls at sustained prices. Fowls, colored 20 to 22 cents per pound, leghorn 15 to 17 cents; broilers, rocks 25 to 32 cents, reds 20 to 28 cents, leghorn 18 to 26 cents.

Live Rabbits

Live rabbits continued to move very slowly. By the coop, 15 to 20 cents per pound.

Dressed Calves

Receipts were light and the market was steady and cleaning up. Choice 13 to 16 cents per pound, fair to good heavies 10 to 11 cents, small to medium 10 to 12 cents.

Livestock

Cattle: Steers very slow; 11 loads on sale; few loads unsold. Common to medium grass steers $5.50 to $7.25, 2 loads dry feds $9.00 to $10.00; generally 25 to 50 cents lower; some off more. Cows scarce, steady to 25 cents lower. Common to medium $4.25 to $5.50; low cutters and cutters $2.00 to $4.00. Bulls nominal. Vealers: steady; few choice $14.00. Lambs in moderate supply, mostly 50 cents lower, slow; good to choice $9.00 to $9.50; medium $7.00 to $8.00; common $5.00 to $6.00. Ewes steady; good to heavy weights $3.50 to $4.00.

Butter-Cheese-Eggs

After fluctuating slightly the first of the week, the butter market closed firm. Creamery salted higher score advanced one cent during the week. Per pound, creamery salted higher score 38 1-2 to 39 cents; extra (92 score) 38 cents.

The cheese market closed steady. New York State fresh cheese advanced one-half cent since Monday. New York State fresh, fancy cheese, 18 1-2 cents per pound.

The egg market took a downward trend during the week on nearby hennery whites closely selected extras, registering a decline of three cents per dozen. The market closed steady to firm. Per dozen: Nearby hennery whites, closely selected extras, 36 to 40 cents; average extras, 32 to 35 cents. Nearby hennery browns, top quality, 33 to 39 cents.

Hay

Receipts of hay increased slightly during the week, but were sold promptly at advancing prices of $1.00 to $2.00 per ton over last week's closing quotations. Bulk of offerings were fair. Per ton: Timothy No. 1, $28.00; No. 2, $27.00 to $28.00; No. 3, $24.00 to $26.00.

An intertilled crop following clover or alfalfa is a good thing in crop rotation, but it is a mistake to grow two or more intertilled crops and several small-grain crops in succession on the same land. Two small-grain crops of the same kind or two intertilled crops are the maximum number of nonleguminous crops that should be grown in succession.

Increase of 37c In Milk Prices

Drought conditions, which have caused a steady shrinkage of milk supplies, necessitate an increase of 37 cents per 100 pounds on Class 1 milk and 20 cents on Class 2 to become effective Monday, August 11, says an announcement by the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc.

"Of course, dealers are not likely to greet any increase in prices with enthusiasm because of the sales resistance it naturally creates. Despite the reluctance of dealers, the metropolitan health authorities and the consuming public to have prices raised, and despite the League's recognition of present economic conditions it has felt compelled to initiate prices that will bring a higher return to producers immediately.

GIVE RIGHT FOODS BEST ICE BOX SPACE

Milk and Broths Should Have Coldest Place, Says College of Home Economics.

Food correctly placed in the refrigerator keeps longer and in better condition than that which is put in carelessly, and this helps to safeguard both the health and the finances of the family, according to the New York State College of Home Economics.

The coldest place in a refrigerator is directly below the ice chamber. The reason for this is that cold air, being heavier than warm, falls when it has been chilled by the ice, and as the warmer air rises simultaneously a continuous current is set up. Therefore, in the "side-icer" type of refrigerator the coldest place is on the bottom, directly under the ice compartment, and the least cold is the top shelf. In the "over-head icer" type, the middle of the top shelf will be found to be coldest, while the bottom and sides are warmest as a result of the current of warm air forced up by the chilled air.

Milk is the most perishable food kept in the refrigerator because it is an ideal medium for bacterial growth at ordinary temperatures. Low temperatures slow down bacterial increase without affecting the composition of the milk, and it should therefore be placed in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Meat broths are also favorable to bacterial growth, and these should be placed in sterilized covered containers close to the milk. Butter is also placed here because low temperature holds back rancidity, and the fresh, cold air contains no odors or flavors, which are readily absorbed by butter. It should be kept in a tight container.

In a "side-icer" refrigerator the next coldest place is on the other side of the bottom. Meats, fish, custards and left-overs with cream sauce, or delicate vegetables should be placed here. The next shelf above should be occupied by frutis, vegetables and eggs. Eggs do not require as low a temperature as is generally supposed, and will keep satisfactorily here. Fruits and vegetables with a strong oror, such as melons, oranges, cabbage and apples should be kept at the top of the refrigerator, where the odor will be carried off by the melting ice.

It is essential to leave space between and at the sides of foods and containers for circulation of air. Failure to do this defeats the whole purpose of the construction of the refrigerator.

The possibilities in fur farming as a business enterprise are illustrated, according to the Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture, by the fact that of all the silver-fox pelts sold on the raw-fur markets today, more than 98 per cent are from ranch-bred foxes.

Dead chestnutwood loses its tannin content so slowly that it is possible to extract tannin from native chestnut trees for 30 years after their death.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

ABDOMINAL PAIN

Speaking plainly, "bellyache." Fifty years ago, a patient complained of it was jollied a bit,—finally given a good "swig" of castor oil, which generally subdued the villain, and, closed the incident happily for all concerned.

A volume might be—indeed many have been—written on abdominal pain; there is no more important symptom in the category of human ailments than this.

It may mean a most serious process starting up; the physician knows this—the patient may not. Given a woman and a child, both suffering from pain in the same locality; the cause of distress in each may be far from similar, and demand entirely different treatment. The day of hit-or-miss medicine has gone.

The sufferer with abdominal pain, acute or chronic, should consult the family physician the very first thing; take no medicine whatever until he advises it. Many a life has been lost by the delay caused by trying out really strong medicines that are "purely vegetable", and are in the family medicine chest. Some of these contain strong portions of aloes, podophyllin, belladonna and the like—that should never be taken without a capable physician's advice.

The day of strong purgation to "stir up the liver" is a thing of the past. The medicine that literally tears through an errant digestive tract may get results—but may set up trouble that it will cost many dollars and anxiety to relieve.

There are a few medicines that are known to be harmless; but more harm can be done by taking a chance shot at an abdominal pain from the family medicine chest, than in any other condition that I recall at this time. We used to drink castor oil and turpentine for most everything; but, in these days of appendicitis and Bright's disease, such procedures are dangerously absurd.

STACKING STRAW

Disposal or proper stacking of straw is a very important step in controlling the stable fly, one of the worst pests of livestock throughout the country. Straw stacks are the principal breeding places of the pest, especially in the grain belt. Straw to be kept for bedding or food should be very carefully stacked. Make the sides of the stack nearly verticle and round the top well to shed rain. After the straw is stacked, clean up loose straw or chaff and burn it. Straw not needed in the winter should be disposed of immediately after threshing. Plow it under or burn it. Surplus straw should be disposed of in early spring or it will furnish flies continually in spring and summer.

OLD HOME WEEK VISITORS TO ATTEND BATH FAIR

Plans for an "Old Home Week" in which former residents will return to Steuben County for a three-day visit, September 25, 26 and 27, were announced last week by Michael Cahill of New York City, president of the Steuben County Society. Decision to make the trip was made following the enthusiastic response to the idea by members of the Steuben County Society.

According to the tentative program now being formed, the Steubenites will arrive in Bath Thursday morning, September 25, in private cars, arranged by President J. M. Davis of the D. L. & W. Railroad. They will attend the Bath Fair in a body on that day and will spend the rest of the week-end visiting the various communities in the county and renewing old friendships. At least 100 former residents are expected to form the excursion.

A committee of Steuben County Society members and of representative citizens in several Steuben towns is being appointed to carry forward the program for the week-end. While the activities will be more or less informal to give the visitors full opportunity to see their former acquaintances, an outing and dinner will probably be arranged.

Invitation is to be extended to Steubenites living throughout the western part of the state to join the New York delegation in their home-coming.

Dotted Swiss and organdie dresses keep their fresh appearance if pressed frequently on the wrong side.

ADDISON WON A PITCHERS' BATTLE

Bennett and Baker Hitched Up In One of Their Old Time Battles.

The Champs shook off their jinx at Elkland Sunday and won a red hot pitchers' battle between Bennett and Baker by the score of 3 to 2, after nine of the hardest fought innings that the Tri-County League has seen in many a day. Both pitchers were in fine form and the hitting was confined to four for Addison and two for Elkland and slow fielding accounted for one of the two that Elkland made off Bennett. Bennett struck out 11 men and Baker 10, but Baker issued five free passes and his wildness kept him in hot water and one pass was turned into a run for Addison. Errors figured in the run getting by both sides. The game was somewhat marred by the failure of the assigned League umpires to appear and the game got under way finally with two Elkland men officiating. This led to considerable kicking, but all differences were finally fixed up although one umpire passed out of the picture before the end. Outside of the stellar pitching, LaChance turned in a fine catching exhibition. The first Elkland man to attempt larceny died so far from second base that not another tried it during the entire game. The Addison infield, particularly Hewson and M. Whitmore worked well. O'Keefe was the only man in the game to hit safely more than once. Phil Hickey made a nice running catch. Caffo played a fine third for Elkland.

Addison got off well in the third. Grange walked and went to second when Baker tried to catch him off first. Hewson's smash got away from Spencer and M. Whitmore drove a long single to right center. All of which netted two runs. Three errors gave Elkland a run in the fourth. Up to this time Elkland had failed to register a safe hit, but in the sixth, Baker singled through the infield and with two out, Dorn received credit for a double on a fly ball which should have been an out, scoring Baker and tieing the count. Addison won the game in the eighth. O'Keefe started it with his second hit. Hewson sacrificed him to second and Baker uncorked a wild pitch, from where he scored on LaChance's grounder, which the Elkland infield failed to hold. Only one Elkland man reached first after the sixth inning and that was on an error. In the ninth Bennett struck out the side.

ADDISON MAN GETS MESSAGE FROM ADMIRAL BYRD

A pathetic incident shown in the remarkable motion picture entitled "With Byrd at the South Pole", recently exhibited in Buffalo, involves the tragic death of a faithful dog "Spy", one of the "huskies" used for drawing the supply sleds over the snow. This animal became sick, lame and unable to work in his team, so an effort was made to keep him at the main camp; but he escaped and traveled a long distance with his mates, hobbling along painfully until compelled by exhaustion to stop and lie down. As he could neither be taken on further nor sent back to the base, it was necessary to shoot him and leave his body where it fell.

This episode was taken as the theme of a poem, "To a Dog Left in Little America", written by Willis R. Perry after seeing the picture and published in the Buffalo Evening News. Mr. Perry sent Rear-Admiral Byrd a copy of this versified tribute to "Spy" and has received from him an autographed letter of thanks and appreciation. Mr. Byrd has been awarded a medal in recognition of his humane treatment of the dogs attached to the Antarctic Expedition party. It has been reported, also, that his fox terrier, "Igloo", that accompanied him to Antarctica, was killed by an automobile after his return to the United States.

BIRTHDAYS CELEBRATED AT ANDERSON HOME

Much of health and happiness mark the passing weeks at the Anderson Health Home of South Canisteo. Since the opening of the camp Andrew Coates, Dorothy Griffin, Mary Coleman, Ethel Beebe and Jimmy Dix have celebrated a birthday. These have been real birthdays with candles on the cake and gifts and all the rest of the children guests at the party.

In spite of the heat a nice showing of handicraft has been made including drawing, coloring, paper cutting and folding, scrap books of camp activities and health posters. This work will be used during December for window exhibits in connection with the annual Christmas Seal Sale.

A great deal of sentiment surrounds the flag presented to the camp by Mr. William Garrison of Bath in memory of his mother. The loyal friends from the Up To Date gave and erected the pole and one of the finest sights of the camp is the morning flag raising and salute and the lowering of the colors at sundown with the children carrying out faithfully letter and spirit of the law "Our flag must never touch the ground".

Between meal lunches of milk and sandwiches served in the play tent at 10:00 A. M. and 3:00 P. M. have proven very beneficial. Miss Weeks, the nurse in charge is an expert dietitian and some very stubborn cases of malnutrition have made remarkable gains under her care this summer.

Rev. Carl Dawkins, pastor of the Baptist Church, Canisteo, conducted the services at the home August 3rd, and Rev. Homer B. Potter, pastor of the Park Methodist Church, Hornell had charge Sunday afternoon, August 10th. These Sunday services round out the program of health, patriotic and religious training which Steuben County's only charity aims to give her children. The Home is open to the public at all times and those interested in the work are urged to make frequent visits.

Hot Weather Breakfast

Everyone appreciates an attractive-looking breakfast table, and nearly everyone occasionally feels utterly tired of the usual breakfast.

The ordinary household's breakfast dishes must not take many minutes' preparation in the morning or even ask for much effort the day before. But often we can have delicious things for breakfast with very little trouble beforehand.

For one thing there is fruit. Be sure that the fruit you serve is fresh and clean as to skin and cool. Most of the summer fruits are very little trouble to serve. Whole peaches, plums or pears, halved musk melons and summer berries are all both easy and tempting.
